

Editorial

Norman Goldstein MD
Editor, Hawaii Medical Journal

This Month Unconventional Medical Systems and Management of Stage I Endometrial Adenocarcinoma

We start this issue with Frank Tabrah's exploration into the world of unconventional medicine. Frank once again proves he is a Renaissance Man, a medical researcher, historian, anthropologist, and practicing clinician as well. This is a "must read" for every physician and medical student.

Dr. Keith Terada reviews 130 of his patients treated for Stage I Adenocarcinoma of the endometrium. As one of our Peer Reviewers commented on Keith's manuscript, "it is refreshing to see an article (of this magnitude) with a single author". Keith is an extremely well-trained and very busy experienced gynecological / oncological surgeon.

Hawaii is fortunate in having Frank Tabrah and Keith Terada teaching and practicing in Hawaii.

of Governor Cayetano's Blue Ribbon Panel on Living and Dying With Dignity, on which I served.

These will:

- Require insurers to cover hospice consultations.
- Require insurers to pay for bed and board in hospice care homes.
- Allow new care homes with no more than five patients to locate in residential districts. (Believe me, they can be good neighbors. One in Kailua is vastly helped by friendly neighborhood volunteers.)

Prior to seeking hospice care, patients may be under home care with insurance subsidy for skilled nursing visits, in a rehabilitation hospital, in a skilled-care home or under private care.

Tightened federal allowances for Medicare and Medicaid have been a factor in the closing of five of 22 Hawaii home health-care programs, including those of Straub, Kapiolani and Kahuku hospitals and a Waianae program.

Competition for federal and private insurance dollars may be a consideration in late hospice referrals.

Guidance to find out what is best for any patient may be sought from the state's Executive Office on Aging (586-0100), St. Francis Hospice (595-7566), Hawaii Association for Home Care (735-2970) or Long Term Care Hawaii (593-8111) and, for legal concerns, the Elder Law program at the University of Hawaii (956-9439).

A.A. Smyser is the Star-Bulletin's contributing editor. His column runs Tuesday and Thursday.

Editor's Note:

Mahalo again to the Honolulu Star-Bulletin for permission to reprint the "Hawaii's World" column from the pen of contributing Editor, A.A. "Bud" Smyser. Thank you, Bud, for your continued support of Hospice in Hawaii.

Special Contribution

"Legislature acted to help hospice care"
from the Honolulu Star-Bulletin's "Hawaii's World" by A.A. "Bud" Smyser

Over 40 years ago, Cicely Saunders, a London nurse, was so disturbed by the pain and suffering of dying patients that she studied for a medical degree to allow her to open a home to treat them more humanely. Its emphasis: comfort over curing.

In 1967 she opened St. Christopher's Hospice in London. Its success has led to some 3,000 hospices in America— including seven in Hawaii with an eighth to come.

Hospice care is a concept, not a place. It can be delivered at home as well as in an institution. Its core concept is to alleviate pain, promote mental as well as physical comfort and work for "good dying" that makes patients abandon any idea of crying out for death.

Now 80, and knighted, Dame Saunders has left active management but still visits St. Christopher's patients.

A peaceful death after coming to terms with dying still eludes some patients, she said recently, but the good work she started has helped more than a million people.

St. Francis Medical Center opened Hawaii's first hospice in 1978. Initially few doctors would refer patients. Now hundreds make referrals but many still wait too long.

Hospices come closest to their goal when they have a few months to comfort and adjust patients and families before death. The median for Hawaii referrals is just over three weeks. Some come just a day or two before death— far, far too late.

Hawaii hospices are uniformly overjoyed by this year's passage by the Legislature of House Bill 172 to carry out recommendations

PHYSICIANS Air Force Healthcare. Good Pay. Professional Respect.

Why Do You Think We Say "Aim High"?

Experience the best of everything. Best facilities. Best benefits. Outstanding opportunities for travel, 30 days vacation with pay, training and advancement.

For an information packet call 1-800-423-USAF
or visit www.airforce.com.

You'll see why we say, "Aim High."

